comes as near to it as anything we know of. It strengthens the digestion and nerves by making pure red blood. We don't know of anything better for debilitated men and women.

OWOSSO, FRIDAY, JULY 9, 1897.

The Answer Was a Hiss.

One of the Tammany leaders is on record as saying it will be impossible for the democrats to control Greater New York unless the two factions of the party unite. It was supposed that the Independence day celebration by Tammany Hall on Monday was to show the world, and particularly the democrats, that it was possible for the two factions or the several factions of the party in New York to unite. Invitations were sent to ex-President Cleveland, representing the gold faction of the democratic party, and to W. J. Bryan, representing the other. Both gentlemen sent letters of regret. The ex-president expressed the hope that the significance of the meeting would be a clear and emphatic announcement of the principles and beliefs which accord with the best and most thoughtful sentiments and opinions of our countrymen. This was saying nothing at all. Certainly there was nothing in it to offend any sort of a democrat, but the letter was hissed. Mr. Bryan expressed the hope that the meeting might prove the inauguration of a campaign which will result in putting Greater New York under democratic control. This letter was loudly cheered. Ex-Senator David B. Hill emphasized the point made by the Tammany leader. He had one practical suggestion to make at this crisis in the affairs of the democratic party: "The republican managers expect to make Greater New York a republican city. Democratic division will fulfill their expectations. Democratic unity will disappoint them. The course of the democracy is plain. Let us defeat our enemies."

The keynote of the meeting was the necessity for democratic union. The appeal of the leaders was union for the sake of controlling Greater New York. To promote union there should have been concession, compromise, and courtesy. There was nothing of the kind. When Mr. James D. Richardson, of Tennessee, who made the principal speech of the evening, spoke of Grover Cleveland as a man with whom the democrats had been twice successful in the nation, the hisses continued for nearly a minute. The reunion of the democratic party, he said, was coming, and there were already perceptible signs of a glorious revival in the party and a victory for the party next November. Then he incidentally mentioned Mr. Cleveland's name, and there were hisses.

For the first time since the administration of Andrew Johnson the name of the ex-president was hissed by the party that elected him. The only man that led the national democratic party to victory in thirty-six years was hissed, and the name of the man who led it to defeat was cheered. Democrats are, of course, peculiar people, and they may see in this sort of demonstration signs of the millennium, when the gold democrats and the silver democrats will shake hands and embrace each other, but to a man up a tree these are not signs of peace. It is not customary in the republican party or in any other well organized party to hiss any man prominent in the party. It is generally supposed that the hiss means the severest sort of condemnation, and the most violent hostility. If this is what the Tammany hiss means, then there is no chance that Mr. Cleveland's friends in New York will unite with the men who make it their business to hiss his name whenever it is mentioned. The Tammanyites hiss because Mr. Cleveland did not support Mr. Bryan, and in visiting their vengeance on him they strike at all the gold men in the city of New York.

Senator Hill is a practical politician. In advising Tammany he put aside all discussion of differences, asking attention to only one point. If the democrats wanted to control Greater New York they must unite. If they did not they simply surrender the city to the republicans. Ten minutes after this letter was read Tammany threw down the gauntlet to the Cleveland men, hissed the name of the ex-president, and said in as many words they would make no concessions to the gold democrats. Under the circumstances it cannot be expected that the gold democrats will make any concessions to men so discourteous and violent in their hostility, and so gratuitously offensive in their demands, and so unreasonably in their whole line of conduct toward the ex-president and his followers. All the gentlemen who pose as leaders of the party made their appeals for harmony, and the answer was a hiss, and this means war, and not peace.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

To Make the "Wheels Go Round."

Walter Wellman, under date of June 28, writes from Washington to the Chicago Times-Herald:

"Two weeks more and the country will have the new tariff law and a chance to start the prosperity wheels revolving.

Senator Allison said tonight he felt sure the senate would pass the tariff bill this week.

On Friday or Saturday it is believed the final vote on the passage of the bill will be taken, and the majority in its favor will be large enough for all practical purposes. The house leaders have been informed that the senate is expected to dispose of the bill before Sunday, and in consequence of this cheerful information General Grosvenor, chairman of the house republican caucus, has sent out a request that all the republican members be in their seats next Monday.

If the senate works up to its schedule the house will have a chance on Monday to concur or non-concur in the senate amendments and to appoint a committee of conference.

The conference committee on the part of the two houses has already been selected. It will consist of seven men from each house, an unusually large committee.

The senatorial conferees are to be Messrs. Aldrich, Allison, Platt, Burrows, Jones of Arkansas, Vest, and White—four republicans and three democrats.

The conferees for the house are to be Messrs. Dingley, Dalzell, Payne, Hopkins, Bailey, McMillin, and Wheeler, also four republicans and three democrats.

The program is to pass the bill in the senate about the 3d of July, and if possible to send the completed measure to President McKinley between the 10th and 15th.

It is safe to reckon that the new tariff will be finally disposed of between those days, and congress is to adjourn at once and give the country a chance to go to the work of restoring normal business prosperity untroubled by tariff uncertainty or financial or other agitation in Washington.

Speaker Reed will appoint the committees of the house before adjournment, so that when congress reassembles in December it will be ready to take up without delay its most important business, which is the passage of the administration currency and banking reform measure to be prepared during the recess by Secretary Gage and his assistants."

Mr. Bryan ought to stop "invading the enemy's country" to make bargains for delegations in 1900 as the price for his silence in local campaigns, and devote his attention to muzzling his special organ, the Omaha World-Herald. That paper has at last yielded to the general conviction that the prosperity at which he continues to scoff is really with us, and is publishing article after article showing the business improvement among the farmers and stock-growers of the west. A late issue of that paper especially calls attention to the revival of the cattle industry, which it says is not only clearly apparent but likely to continue.

Just one-twelfth of the McKinley administration has passed and in that time republicans have done more in the way of carrying out the pledges of the platform than was ever accomplished in double that time by any previous administration. When you consider that this has been done with a Senate in which the republicans are in a minority, you should celebrate the close of the first four months instead of grumbling because the full four years' undertaking has not been completed.

The tariff bill passed the Senate Wednesday afternoon by a vote of 38 yeas to 28 nays, the affirmative vote being cast by 35 republicans, two silver-republicans and one democrat (McEnery, of Louisiana). The bill is now in the hands of a conference committee, and it is to be hoped that a report will be speedily agreed upon and the same adopted by both the Senate and House. There were 874 amendments to the House bill made in the Senate.

Ex-Gov. Boies, of Iowa, has refused longer to follow the free-coinage-of-silver proposition, and is out in an urgent argument in favor of a paper currency based solely on the market value of the silver bullion against which it would be issued. Gov. Boies' repudiation of the democratic doctrine which proposes to base a currency on legislative action which should call for 46 cents a dollar is a severe blow to the free coinage.

The national debt was decreased over $10,000,000 during June.

Mr. Converse also spent Sunday in the city but left Monday to visit Milwaukee during the meeting of the National Teachers' Association. He will then go to Beloit, Wis., where he will have charge of the schools next year and will attend to some matters there before returning to Owosso.

Morris Osburn walked into Osburn & Sons' store yesterday, accompanied by his dog Spot and a very small, fierce-looking boy, wearing a hat, the crown of which was entirely gone, while the rim also had a very dilapidated appearance. The boy thought he had a case against Mr. Osburn since Mr. Osburn's horse had torn his hat to pieces. He was fitted up with a new hat, however, and departed a much milder and more respectable specimen of Young America.

Lansing Republican:—Without particularizing, it may be said that the county treasurers of the state are responding quite freely to the late request of Auditor-General Dix to remit their taxes to the state with as little delay as possible. The present daily receipts of the auditor general are, therefore, large. One county treasurer yesterday, for instance, remitted $38,000. This will convey some idea of the way in which the state's strong box is being replenished under the guiding hand of our able auditor general.
